QUESTIONS PRESENTED FOR REVIEW

1. Was petitioner denied his constitutional guaranties of equal protection and due process under the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution by being required to have his case tried in an Arkansas venue which was not proper for a case brought on open account and under an Arkansas statute which when previously applied to a corporation, was found to be unconstitutional?

2. Was the petitioner denied equal protection and due process under the Fourteenth Amendment of the United States Constitution by the refusal of the Arkansas Supreme Court to consider petitioner's constitutional argument regarding the venue statute and to consider the action as one on open account from the record submitted?

PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE SUPREME COURT OF ARKANSAS

Petitioner prays that a writ of certiorari issue to review the judgment of the Supreme Court of Arkansas entered in the case on the 12th day of March, 1990, and on which rehearing was denied by the Arkansas Supreme Court on the 16th day of April, 1990.

The opinion of the Supreme Court of Arkansas was published and appears at

___S.W.2d.___. It is annexed as Appendix "A" to this petition. The Order Denying Rehearing to the knowledge of this petitioner is unreported. It is annexed as Appendix "B" to this petition. This opinion was the result of a review of a judgment of the Circuit Court of Sebastian County, Arkansas, which is attached hereto as Appendix "C".

HOW THE FEDERAL QUESTIONS WERE RAISED AND DECIDED BY THE COURT BELOW

Petitioner, through his counsel, objected to venue of the Circuit Court of Sebastian County, Arkansas, in which respondent brought its action against petitioner from such action's initial stages. Petitioner maintained his objection throughout the proceedings in the trial court and on appeal to the Arkansas Supreme Court as such venue being contrary to Arkansas law and in violation of constitutional guaranties of equal protection and due process. The matters were overruled in the trial court. Petitioner on appeal to the Arkansas Supreme Court also presented the issue that the Arkansas statute upon which the court had found venue was not proper, had been found to be unconstitutional as to corporations, and therefore had to be unconstitutional in regard to individuals such as the petitioner who were situated in a position similar to that of corporations. The Arkansas Supreme Court denied the petitioner any relief and affirmed the judgment of the trial court.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Arkansas was entered on March 12, 1990. A timely Petition for Rehearing was filed and was denied on April 16, 1990. Jurisdiction of this court is invoked under 28 U.S.C.A., 1990 Revised Rules of the Supreme Court, Rule 13.4 and 28 U.S.C.A. §1257 (a).

CONSTITUTIONAL STATUTORY PROVISIONS INVOLVED IN THIS CASE

This case involves Arkansas Code Annotated §16-60-109 which provides in relevant part:

> "a. Contract actions against a nonresident of this state or a foreign corporation may be brought in any county in which the plaintiff resided at the time the cause of action arose."

The case also involves Arkansas Code Annotated §16-60-111 which provides in relevant part as follows:

> "a. An action on a debt, account, or note, or for goods or services may be brought in the county where the defendant resided at the time the cause of action arose."

And further involved in the action is Arkansas Code Annotated §16-60-114:

> "a. Contract actions by resident subcontractor, supplier, or materialman against a prime contractor or subcontractor who is a nonresident of this state or who is a foreign corporation may be brought in the county in which a plaintiff resided at the time the cause of action arose."

The constitutional provisions involved include the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution, in relevant part as follows:

> "... nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner is an Oklahoma resident engaged as an individual in the auto parts retail business. Respondent at the time herein concerned was an auto parts distributor doing business in Oklahoma, Arkansas., and other states with its principal place of business in Fort Smith, Arkansas. In 1985 petitioner was solicited in Oklahoma by respondent to join its line of auto parts stores. In early 1986, petitioner traveled to Arkansas to look as respondent's program and then respondent's employees traveled to Oklahoma and looked at petitioner's retail stores and the parties made an agreement at that time. Disputes arose between the parties over the terms of the agreement, particularly in the regard to payments or credits for merchandise and the agreement of the parties was termined by the respondent in December of 1987.

In March of 1988, petitioner filed a federal diversity action against respondent in the Eastern District of Oklahoma for breach of written and oral agreements, wrongful termination of written and oral agreements, and tortious interference with business relations and defamation. Respondent answered generally denying petitioner's claims and counterclaiming for collection of open accounts claimed due.

In October of 1988, respondent filed a complaint against petitioner in the Circuit Court of Sebastian County, Arkansas, for collection of the same open accounts contained in its counterclaim in federal court. Petitioner presented motions to dismiss the respondent's action in the Arkansas and federal courts for improper venue and other matters which were overruled by the trial court. The case proceeded to jury trial in the Arkansas court, and a verdict was rendered against petitioner.

The petitioner filed a timely motion for new trial with the trial court which was subsequently overruled. The petitioner then timely appealed to the Supreme Court of Arkansas which affirmed the trial court on March 12, 1990. Petitioner timely filed for rehearing in the Supreme Court of Arkansas which was denied on April 16, 1990. From such judgment and orders, the petitioner now appeals. At the time the action was brought in the Arkansas court by respondent, petitioner had no parts stores operating in Arkansas, but did own real estate and had had a parts store previously in Siloam Springs, Washington County, Arkansas, which had been closed subsequent to doing business with respondent. Petitioner's argument for change of venue was based upon the fact that he had no property, business, or debts in Sebastian County, Arkansas, and that the only place proper in Arkansas for the action to be brought would have been Washington County, Arkansas.

ARGUMENT

1. THE TRIAL COURT'S OVERRULING OF PETITIONER'S MOTION TO DISMISS FOR IMPROPER VENUE WAS ERROR BECAUSE PETITIONER WAS A NONRESIDENT SUED ON AN OPEN ACCOUNT WHICH UNDER ARKANSAS VENUE STATUTES HAD TO BE BROUGHT WHERE HE OWNED PROPERTY OR HAD DEBTS OWING WITHIN THE STATE.

Petitioner at all times concerned was a resident of the State of Oklahoma. Respondent was a Delaware corporation with its principal place of business located in Fort Smith, Sebastian County, Arkansas. When a dispute arose between the parties over their agreement which involved the accounts of petitioner with respondent, each party brought a separate action.

Petitioner first filed an action against respondent in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Oklahoma. Respondent subsequently filed an action for collection of the open accounts against petitioner in the Circuit Court of Sebastian County, Arkansas. At the time of bringing of such action by respondent, petitioner had no retail stores nor had he ever had any retail stores that did business with respondent in Sebastian County, Arkansas. Petitioner did own property and had done business through a retail store, both in Washington County, Arkansas. Petitioner filed a motion to dismiss the Sebastian County action of respondent for improper venue because the action brought as one on open account required that petitioner have property or debts due him in Sebastian County, Arkansas, for the action to be proper there; petitioner did not, The trial court overruled the petitioner's motion to dismiss, and the matter proceeded to trial. Judgment was entered against petitioner in the trial court, and the matter, after rehearing to the trial court was denied, proceeded on appeal to the Supreme Court of Arkansas which affirmed the trial court decision. Petitioner now appeals the affirmation by the Supreme Court of Arkansas, after denial of timely rehearing in said court.

The suit brought by respondent was on open account as set forth in its original complaint in the record. See Appendix "D". Under Arkansas law, ACA §16-60-111, the respondent should have brought its action where the defendant resided at the time the cause of action arose.

"ACA §16-60-111. Actions on debt, account, or note.
a. An action on a debt, account, or > note, or for goods or services may be brought in the county where the defendant resided at the time the cause of action arose."

At the time the cause of action arose, when the accounts were created, the defendant, petitioner herein, resided in Oklahoma. However, the respondent brought its action in the county in which it resided at the time the cause of action arose. Arkansas law had a provision which allowed contract actions against nonresidents to be where plaintiff resided at the time the cause of action arose. However, this kind of venue statute was declared unconstitutional by the Arkansas Supreme Court in the case of Philco-Ford Corp. v. Holland, 261 Ark. 404, 548 S.W.2d 828 (1977). The respondent has tried to equate a similar Arkansas statutory provision, ACA §16-60-114, as giving venue to the Circuit Court of Sebastian County.

a. Contract actions by resident subcontractor, supplier, or materialman against a prime contractor or subcontractor who is a nonresident of this state or who is a foreign corporation may be brought in the county in which plaintiff resided at the time the cause of action arose."

Because this statute also treats foreign and domestic corporations, and foreign and domestic individuals, differently, such would also be unconstitutional in the holding of Philco-Ford Corp. v. Holland, supra.

The Arkansas Supreme Court however did not feel from the record before it that the petitioner herein had proved that the action was one on open account. The Arkansas court refused to consider petitioner's argument that the complaint filed by the respondent was evidence of that fact. The court therefore would not consider the unconsitutional argument because nothing was shown that the argument was previously raised in the trial court. The record, however, evidences that those matters were raised in the trial court as fully as could be at the time under the stance of the pleading at any such particular time before the court. The petitioner had at all time maintained that the residence of the respondent, Sebastian County, Arkansas, was an improper venue, and the record shows his repeated objections.

2. THE RECORD OF THE TRIAL COURT WAS A SUFFICIENT RECORD FOR THE SUPREME COURT OF ARKANSAS TO CONSIDER THE RESPONDENT'S COMPLAINT TO BE ONE ON OPEN ACCOUNT AND TO CONSIDER THE PETITIONER'S CONSTITUTIONAL ARGUMENT REGARDING VENUE.

The Supreme Court of the State of Arkansas failed, refused, or neglected to consider the complaint as filed by the respondent in the Circuit Court of Sebastian County, Arkansas, as any evidence of the kind of action brought by said respondent. It is clear from looking at said complaint that the action is brought on open account. This is directly contrary to the statement in the opinion of the Arkansas Supreme Court as follows:

> "He (Helm) has not shown that the action amounted to no more than one on an open account." Mid-America Industries, Inc. vs. Delbert Neil Helm, ___ S.W.2d ___ (See Appendix "A").

The Supreme Court of Arkansas further would not consider the unconstitutionality of the section upon which the respondent sought to base venue stating as follows:

> "Helm has also made an argument that §16-60-109(a) is unconstitutional. We do not reach the issue because there is nothing to show that the argument was raised in the trial court. Wilson v. Wilson, 270 Ark. 485, 606 S.W.2d 56 (1980)." Mid-America Industries, Inc. vs. Delbert Neil Helm, ___ S.W.2d ___ (See Appendix "A").

Fairness, justice, and the rights of individuals guaranteed under the Constitution should have been sufficient for the Arkansas Supreme Court to consider the constitutional question. Whether or not it was presented fully, completely, and in a manner that the Arkansas Supreme Court thought it should have, was a matter of interpretation. The record shows that the issue of venue was raised from the beginning of the case, that petitioner was a nonresident, and that the location of the suit on open account was brought at the residence of the respondent, contrary to Arkansas law, and that to allow the same means that petitioner is treated differently from a resident of Arkansas since the open account venue statute requires it to be brought where the debtor is a resident. The method and time of presentation was adequate because the threshhold of presentation was put forth in the state court action. The background of the facts of the case and the law of the State of Arkansas regarding the issue of the constitutionality of their venue statute herein questioned is sufficiently present in the record to have allowed the Supreme Court of the State of Arkansas and this court to decide such constitutional question. The property interest protected by due process require a constitutional review of the Arkansas venue statutes. The petitioner has from inception of respondent's action claimed that his federal constitutional rights of due process and equal protection of the laws is being violated by the Arkansas Courts affirming the respondent's choice of venue. These rights as being guaranteed under the federal constitution are therefore sufficiently presentable on appeal since they were presented in the lower courts.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons hereinabove cited, particularly that that courts of the State of Arkansas have refused to recognize the form of action brought by the respondent as being one on open account and to apply the venue statutes of the state in accordance with such form of action, and particularly because the courts of Arkansas have refused to give consideration to the constitutional rights of petitioner to due process and equal protection of the laws by directly denying or refusing to consider his position on such matters, this Court should grant petitioner's Writ of Certiorari and thereby review such matters.

APPENDIX "A"

SUPREME COURT OF ARKANSAS

No. 89-226

DELBERT NEIL HELM, d/b/a
BILLS GREEN LIGHT AUTO PARTS,
Appellant,
v.
MID-AMERICA INDUSTRIES, INC.,
Appellee.

Opinion delivered March 12, 1990
Appeal from Sebastian County Circuit Court (CIV 89-925)
Honorable Don Langston, Circuit Judge
Affirmed

DAVID NEWBERN, Associate Justice

Delbert Neil Helm appeals from a judgment against him for $1,059,927.15 in favor of the appellee, Mid-America Industries, Inc. The judgment, which was based on a jury verdict, resulted from business dealings between the parties. Helm contends the Sebastian County Circuit Court lacked jurisdiction of him and was not the proper venue for the action. He also argues the court erred in proceeding with the action against him because it was already pending in a federal court in Oklahoma. Finally, he contends it was error to deny his motion for a continuance which he sought on the basis of illness of his counsel. Helm's abstract is flagrantly deficient with respect to most of these points, but Mid-America has filed a supplementary abstract which will allow us to decide them, and we find they contain no merit. We, therefore, affirm the judgment.

Mid-America, a Delaware corporation, is a "Green Light" automobile parts wholesaler which has its principal place of business in Ft. Smith, Sebastian County, Arkansas. Helm is a resident of Oklahoma who operated parts stores in Oklahoma and Arkansas. Ed York, a Mid-America officer, testified about the circumstances which led to the business relationship between the corporation and Helm. Helm came to Ft. Smith and the Mid-America office in February, 1986, and announced to a Mid-America employee who received him there his intention to become a Green Light parts dealer. York was unavailable to speak to Helm just then, but he called Helm, and a week later, Helm returned to Ft. Smith with his brother and another person who was his comptroller. They were given a presentation by Mid-America on the Green Light store process. Several weeks later, Mid-America officials toured several of Helm's stores in Oklahoma and Arkansas.

York testified that Helm's stock consisted of "distressed" merchandise defined as merchandise sold at a loss, as in a fire sale. York told Helm he would expect Helm to dispose of the distressed type merchandise and not purchase any more of it for sale if he became a Green Light dealer. Helm said he would comply with that request. The alleged breach of this promise is a major element of the dispute which arose. Mid-America and Helm entered written agreements with respect to Helm's stores at Tahlequah and Bartlesville, Oklahoma, and Siloam Springs, Arkansas.

From a document entitled "Third Agreed Pre-Trial Order" which was submitted to the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Oklahoma, and which Helm has given us as an appendix to his abstract, we learn additional facts. Helm filed the federal court action for breach of contract and commercial defamation, and Mid-America counterclaimed for money owed to it by Helm. The summaries of the pleadings in that action reveal that the relationship had grown to other stores. Helm experienced a cash flow problem and was unable to pay his account with Mid-America, and he contended that Mid-America had not properly credited him for merchandise it had agreed he could return and which it failed to pick up. Mid-America's counter-claim was for the balanced owed on Helm's account.

The action in Sebastian County Circuit Court was filed by Mid-America subsequent to the initiation of the federal action by Helm. The federal court declined to enjoin the state proceeding, and the circuit court denied Helm's motion to dismiss in favor of the federal action as well as his motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction and improper venue.

1. Jurisdiction in personam

Although it is argued that all of Helm's Arkansas automobile parts stores were closed at the time this action commenced, and Mid-America's argument mentions the fact on another point, there is nothing abstracted to demonstrate it. Nor do we have any information as to the place where Helm was served in process, although Helm states in argument that he was served in Oklahoma. As far as we know, from the abstract of the record, Helm was still doing business with Mid-America in Arkansas when the action was filed. Even if that were not the case, however, we would have no trouble affirming the trial court's determination that Helm was subject to its jurisdiction.

Arkansas Code Ann. §16-4-101(c)(1)(a) (1987) provides that an Arkansas court may exercise jurisdiction of a person "who acts directly or by an agent" as to a claim "arising from the persons ... [t]ransacting any busines in this state." The evidence surrounding Helm's initiation of his relationship with Mid-America is probably sufficient to satisfy the requirement of the statute. If not, however, the fact that Helm operated a store at Siloam Springs, at least from 1986 to 1988, which was responsible for some of the debt for which he was sued clearly satisfied it.

In Wisconsin Brick and Block Corp. v. Cole, 274 Ark. 121, 622 S.W.2d 192 (1981), we denied a writ of prohibition which had been sought to prevent an Arkansas court from assuming jurisdiction of a Wisconsin company. We held that the question of whether the company was "transacting business" in Arkansas was one of fact, and if the trial court erred in deciding the question we could correct it on appeal but not in response to a writ of prohibition. In the course of deciding that case, we noted that our long-arm statute, cited above, was meant to "permit courts to exercise the maximum personal jurisdiction allowable by due process, and the statute should be liberally construed."

The only facts before us here show clearly that Mid-America's claim arose directly, at least in part, from business transacted by Helm in Arkansas. In addition, his contacts with this state surpassed the minimum required by the Supreme Court interpretation of the United States Constitution in International Shoe v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310 (1945), and Helm could have foreseen he could be haled into a court in this state to answer claims arising from his activies here. See World-Wide Volkswagon Corp. v. Woodsen, 444 U.S. 286 (1980).

The only case cited by Helm we need distinguish is Union National Bank v. Thornton, 293 Ark. 385, 738 S.W.2d 103 (1987), in which we held that the sending of monthly payments to an Arkansas bank was not a sufficient contact to satisfy the requirements of Ark. Code Ann. §16-4-101 C. 1. (d) (1987) having to do with jurisdiction of nonresidents alleged to have committed torts in Arkansas. Obviously Helm's acts in Arkansas were considerably in excess of sending his monthly payments to Mid-Amercia.

2. Venue

Helm contends that Mid-America's action was one on a open account and thus the governing provision is Ark. Code Ann. §16-60-111(a) (1987) which requires that it be brought in the county of the defendant's residence at the time the claim arose. Mid-America contends it was an action on a contract and thus is properly brought against a nonresident in the county of the plaintiffs residence, Ark. Code Ann. §16-60-109(a) (1987); Farmers Bank v. Fuqua Homes, Inc., 259 Ark. 38, 531 S.W.2d 23 (1975), which was Sebastian County.

While neither party has given us an abstract of the complaint in such a way as to show the nature of the action brought, Mid-America has abstracted its motion to amend the pleadings to conform to the proof along with the court's order granting the motion. The proof abstracted which could be said to relate to this point consists of testimony showing that the dispute, at least in part, had to do with written and oral agreements between the parties with respect to at least three of Helm's stores. In its argument, Mid-America has supplied quotations of the instructions showing that the case was submitted to the jury as a contract action.

While we have had some doubt about the matter, Helm, as the appellant objecting to venue, had the burden of demonstrating that venue was improper. Mack Trucks of Ark., Inc. v Jet ASphalt and Rock Co., 246 Ark. 101, 437 S.W.2d 459 (1969). He has not shown that the action amounted to no more than one on an open account.

Helm has also made an argument that §16-60-109(a) is unconsitutional. We do not reach the issue because there is nothing to show that the argument was raised in the trial court. Wilson v. Wilson, 270 Ark. 485, 606 S.W.2d 56 (1980).

3. Prior pending action

Helm contends Mid-America claim should have been dismissed because of the prior pending action in federal court. There is no such requirement. Carter v. Owen-Illinois, Inc., 261 Ark. 728, 551 S.W.2d 209 (1977). Nor was there any requirement that the court exercise the form non conveniens discretion given it by Ark. Code Ann. §16-4-101(E) (1987). See Country Pride Foods Ltd. v. Medina, 279 Ark. 75, 648 S.W.2d 485 (1983); Harvey v. Eastman Kodak Co., 271 Ark. 783, 610 S.W.2d 582 (1981); Grovey v. Washington, 196 Ark. 697, 119 S.W.2d 503 (1938). We find no error in the court's refusal to dismiss.

4. Illness of counsel

Helm moved for a continuance of the trial, attaching an affidavit from a physician stating that Helm's lead counsel was too ill to participate in a trial lasting more than one day. The motion was denied. Mid-America points out that the trial had been twice continued at the request of Helm.

In one of the cases cited by Helm at this point, we noted that whether to grant a continuance on the ground which was asserted in this case is within the sound discretion of the trial court. Missouri & North Arkansas Ry. Co. v. Robinson, 188 Ark. 334, 65 S.W.2d 546 (1933). Also cited in Haislip v. Taylor, 209 Ark. 510, 190 S.W.2d 982 (1945), where we found an abuse of discretion where a party was made to go to trial only two days after a complaint was filed and given only three hours to search for witnesses. We cannot say Helm suffered any comparable hardship. While one of the two Oklahoma lawyers representing him in this case was suspended from practice and the other was ill, there has been no showing that the Arkansas attorney with whom they were associated could not have taken up the slack. We decline to hold the court abused its discretion.

Affirmed.
